

CHALLENGES AND ACHIEVEMENTS OF E-EDUCATION

Ibrohimova Marhabo Ulugbek kizi

The Uzbekistan State World Languages University

E-mail: marhaboibrohimova008@gmail.com

Shukurova Shokhsanam Kakhramon kizi

Scientific supervisor

ABSTRACT

In this article, you can find the necessary information about e-learning in foreign countries. There is data about the problems you might face during online learning and what it has succeeded at in the education system. I have given some life experiences for that to be easier and brighter to understand; meanwhile, catch up with the real meaning and value.

Keywords: E-learning, Covid19, achievements, troubles, foreign languages, students, globalized world, modern technologies, gadgets, computers, traditional classes.

In the past few years, numerous organizations at all education levels have been offering online services for learning foreign languages due to the pandemic circumstance or the evolution of digital technologies around the globe. According to precise data obtained from the network, there have been 457.563,393 coronavirus cases and 6,064,407 deaths. (World Health Organization, March 13, 2022). Our streamlined world is becoming e-versioned: e-government, e-books and e-education. In this condition, both students and teachers have to work equally and incorporate to customize the current online platform of learning. Besides, teachers should have special skills and qualifications to elucidate the topic precisely and concretely.

Meanwhile, students need to be smart and quick-witted to comprehend the theme in depth and effectively.

The challenges of online learning. Everything in our life even though they are making our life a lot easier and more accessible, might entail some kind of trouble in some way and online learning is not an exception for that, especially when it comes to learning foreign languages. There are several troubles that students might face while they are mastering a second language. For instance, the biggest obstacle might be dependent on an internet connection or technical problems like internet failures. [1] It differs from country to country, thus it might be difficult to learn foreign languages online if you have passive net connections in your area. It is a disaster when your network breaks down while you are having a lesson and if it is the toughest lesson that you do not understand at all. You of course regret it and it affects your studies as well in a negative way. Some people might take it as a simple condition, however, it is a serious condition when you have similar circumstances to the above. Hence, when you decide to learn foreign languages thoroughly take into account such kinds of positions. [2] Another problem might be a shortage of exposure to the languages, that is to say, it is not adequate to just sit for hours in front of your telephone or computer listening to your teacher from home whether attentively or inattentively. You might feel as if you mastered the lesson deeply and perfectly, however, after some time you may face some problems or you may forget all the information. Furthermore, in this sort of situation, you can have emotions that you can easily detect vital information from the net and thanks to this you will be dependent on the net to get even the most straightforward details from the Internet. One of the most serious problems is the lack of face-to-face interaction during your online lessons both with your teacher and classmates because you cannot feel as in a real class. Besides, you might have a good lesson via some applications like Zoom or Telegram, however, you cannot communicate easily with your master or groupmates or your discussions may be inefficient. It takes a great deal of time to acknowledge the lesson and get the intended answer to your question. Traditional lessons are more entertaining and amusing than online lessons so you can enjoy your lessons and you will satisfy with them entirely. On the other hand, some skills that you learn from e-learning can't be enough like speaking or listening practice. [3] You can look up any kind of word which is unknown or you can master your unfamiliar topic related to grammar or writing from the Internet, but as in learning a foreign language one of the most essential things is communicating with others and understanding what they say to you. For this, you will need both speaking and listening skills and practice them as much as possible. You can learn how to pronounce words clearly and listen to them easily and without any challenges in traditional classes in comparison with online lessons.

The success of online learning. As we know, we are living in a modernized world: telephones, gadgets, computers, robots and so on. Thus, all of us should try to be magnanimous with the current world and learn how to make use of them as they assist us to make our life much more simplified than we think. Online learning, is creating a lot of features for students to learn lessons without any effort or trouble. One of the general advantages of it is its flexibility of it. Namely, you can learn your lessons easily from anywhere you want. You do not need to travel for hours or leave your home with a lot of trouble. [4] You just utilize your net to learn any language at your home comfortable even drinking a cup of coffee at your home. Your teacher can share the desired information concerning your lesson and if you do not fancy your teacher you can select the other one, as there are a lot of teachers, courses and information in the online learning system. Another achievement of e-learning is it is more budget-friendly than traditional ones. You have only required a computer or phone with a good internet connection to learn any kind of language. You have to pay for online courses as well, however, not much money as in traditional classes. If your house is far from your circle you need extra money to go there and it also takes time. Thus, this sort of felicity is also crucial when you decide to master a foreign language. We are living constantly developing world, and in this world, we need more belief and trust in ourselves. Sometimes we are timid to express our emotions in front of others. Therefore, online learning can be helpful to vanquish them in some way, because it might be a practice for us. When you cannot understand the lesson that your teacher taught in-depth you are welcome to ask them, however, you may worry a bit, and you might think about whether your question is appropriate for the lesson or not. [5] Due to that online learning is the way to overcome such kinds of feelings. One more addition to the good outcome of e-learning can be the chance to return to the previous topic that you have missed or misunderstood. In traditional classes, it is impossible to do that because there is no time for that and your teachers may reject you or you might be accused of not concentrating on classes. To compare it with online learning you will not be punished for not understanding the topic, in contrast, you can master it thoroughly at any time you want.

In conclusion, online learning is the most effective way to master any foreign language from any country. Based on a perfect program, online lessons developed by mature specialists are no less than traditional lessons. It is principal for the child's intellectual development to participate in the lesson process together with his peers. Online classes risk taking this important step away from education. Another important aspect of the matter: the topic of the impact of online lessons on the child's psychology and physical health requires research at a theoretical level. After researching for many years, it will be possible to advocate online or offline form of education.

REFERENCES:

1. <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=7t6upKlJnzs>;
2. <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=397xsWvlwjY>;
3. <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=RBw22Cg3POE>;
4. <https://data.unicef.org/covid-19-and-children/> ;
5. <https://blog.pearsoninternationalschools.com/around-the-world-distance-learning-at-cis-international-school/>